Stockholm is the leading candidate to host IGC 2028, though that's not yet confirmed. One way or another though, it's unlikely that we'll be going to any of these places in two years...

1. While the Rangrado 1st of May Stadium would certainly have enough seats to accommodate our Opening Ceremonies and the Ryugyong Hotel would have enough rooms to sleep everyone, we're still not planning on IGC going to this city _____.
2. The Monument of Neutrality would make for a good field trip even if the statue of Sapamurat Niyazov no longer rotates to face the sun. Still, we're unlikely to be going to this city _____.
3. IGC 2028 will sadly not be held in Walla Walla, Bora Bora, or this capital of American Samoa _____.
4. People have suggested Iceland to us over the years, though it's rather expensive. If Reykjavik is too dear, maybe we could consider this largest city of northern Iceland _____.
5. Edinburgh of the Seven Seas has a delightful ring to it, but it would be difficult to get everyone to take the standard 6 day voyage from Cape Town to this island _____.
6. The birdwatching tours would be splendid, but a high crime rate would make this nation, with a Raggiana Bird-of-paradise on its flag an unlikely host _____.
7. While it's in a resort area, something tells me that Ukrainian drones might be an issue if we held IGC 2028 in this largest city in Crimea _____.
8. Polar bears might be a concern if we held IGC 2028 in this capital of Svalbard _____.
9. For all sorts of good reasons, we're unlikely to be holding IGC in this Omani exclave on the Southern end of the Strait of Hormuz _____.
10. Probably unlikely that we'll be bringing IGC to Vozrozhdeniya Island. Not only would its former status as a bioweapons lab be a problem, but it's not even an island anymore since the disappearance of most of this body of water _____.
